Program Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this degree from KSU, students will be able to:

- Synthesize knowledge from a liberal education including social science, natural science, nursing science and the art and ethics of caring as a foundation for providing holistic nursing care.
- Implement competent, patient-centered care of individuals, families, groups, communities, and populations along the health-illness continuum and throughout the lifespan within multicultural environments.
- Utilize leadership skills to critically examine and continuously improve healthcare delivery systems, with emphasis on safety, quality, and fiscal responsibility.
- Analyze current research and apply conceptual/theoretical models for translating evidence into clinical practice.
- Apply knowledge and skills in information management and patient care technology in the delivery of quality patient care.
- Identify the significance of local, state, national, and global healthcare policies including financial and regulatory environments.
- Demonstrate effective communication skills with an interdisciplinary healthcare team including collaboration, negotiation, and conflict management.
- Employ principles of health promotion, and disease/injury prevention in providing care to individuals and populations.
- Assume responsibility and accountability for professionalism, including lifelong learning, and the inherent values of altruism, autonomy, human dignity, integrity, and social justice in the practice of nursing.
