Work Experience:

Fellowship Christian School 11•15•22 – Present Design Intern

As a graphic design intern under the Fellowship Christian School's head graphic designer Shawn Brasfield, I worked on everything from editorials to t-shirt design to sub-logos. From day one, I got to work on projects on my own. I even designed one of their sub-logos that is now being used throughout the school. I believe I have learned more in this internship than I have in my multiple years at Kennesaw State University. My boss, Shawn Brasfield, a former teacher at the Portfolio Center in Atlanta, has taught me an immeasurable amount as a designer, and has helped shape me into the artist I am today.

Freelance 8•12•21 – Present

While I have worked on many small projects for different clients I want to highlight three freelance projects that have shaped me as a designer the most.

1. PSI Roadmap

I had the pleasure to work alongside Place Services Inc, a 150 million dollar company. I designed their project roadmap that is now being used in all of their projects when they reach out to potentially interested companies. Through many different iterations, I learned a lot about client feedback and fitting to the vision of the client you are working for.

2. Verity Tax Credits Logo Redesign

I was reached out by Verity Tax Credits to create a new logo for them as well as new typography and color palette. Through multiple in-person meetings, we were able to decide upon the perfect logo and color scheme that fit their brand. I learned so much about face-to-face interactions with clients in this design project.

3. Jay's (Currently in the works)

My largest project to date. I have been given the opportunity to create the branding for a gas station/restaurant. As this is a project that is still in the works, I cannot divulge too much. This project though, is teaching me so much about brand personality and how to have that show through in my design.

Other

The Furniture Guild 6•12•18 – 10•23•21

I built high-end cabinets and signatures for kitchens and bathrooms. I learned a lot about working on projects alone and being able to allocate time as well as with groups and dividing up work to accomplish a project.
